

JEANNE TULLEN

I use photography to link my past and my present, and to enlarge the borders of reality. My ultimate goal is to make photography and life interfere; the notion of performance is therefore present in my work. My life it is the only thing I truly know and can honestly talk about. I decompose, analyze and question my past, my present and its consequences. Thereafter I use photography as a tool to fill up the missing parts. I am transparent, light comes through me, to imprint myself on a negative film. I am left with a frozen portrait. Is this me? I can look like anything; I have black hair and live in my mother's past, on glossy paper. I have white hair, then I shave it off to be a boy. Then I buy a wig and come back in the past, with white hair again. Photography grants me this shifting time. I can be anyone. This frozen portrait is only an image of me. The naked body has a great importance within my work; it is the clearest view I can have of one self. Why would my face be more authentic than my vagina ? As Hanna Villegar says «We are born naked ; you have nothing but yourself, and this self gives us everything».
