KATHERINA HEIL

Het menselijk lichaam als perceptueel centrum tussen micro- en macrokosmos

Fragmenten zijn nooit zomaar fragmenten. Een steen draagt de herinnering aan een landschap in zich, een lijn suggereert beweging, en een materiaal kan verbanden blootleggen tussen verre plaatsen en het menselijk lichaam. Via tekening, beeldhouwkunst, installaties, fotografie, video en performance onderzoek ik hoe er relaties ontstaan tussen materie, waarneming, ruimte en tijd. Wetenschappelijke beelden, geologische sporen en observatietechnieken dienen als uitgangspunten – niet om de wereld te verklaren, maar om te bevragen hoe we die waarnemen en interpreteren. Mijn praktijk volgt verbanden tussen het zichtbare en het onzichtbare, het vertrouwde en het onbekende, en suggereert dat elk fragment sporen draagt van grotere processen en relaties.

2025 Wild Mind Kind Matter Massoumi Gallery Hamburg, Duitsland In ‘Wild Mind Kind Matter’, Katherina Heil presents a vivid landscape of thoughts, an expansive composition of sculpture, drawing and installation-based language. Her works are not fixed answers, but rather open states, tentative explorations, proposals for a different way of seeing material, the body and the world. Heil works with “a lot of material” — not only in terms of quantity, but also in its depth and emotional resonance. Kind matter, as she calls it: material that is gentle and generous, not dominant, offering itself as a resonator, mediator, or carrier of ideas. Yet this material is far from passive, it holds thoughts, carries them forward, develops its own life. It becomes autonomous, standing as an equal presence within the space. Her works are building blocks of a larger architecture of thought. Heil continuously recombines media, forms, and surfaces. Her constellations are never final, they shift, reorganize and create new narratives and perspectives. There are no boundaries between media: line, mass, space, and gravity all come into play and everything can become a vehicle of expression. www.massoumi.art/katherina-heil

2022 RSVP Billytown Gallery Den Haag, Nederland On January 28th Billytown opened its doors with an exhibition showing the work of 30 artists. After almost two years of shuffling between togetherness and isolation, we recognize the importance of connections, conversations and working relationships as a necessity for any artistic practice. Artists don't exist in a vacuum, they are part of intricate networks of colleagues, friends, teachers, and family. While we may not yet be able to bring people together, we can bring works together. For this exhibition artists from within Billytown each invited a guest to show a work in parallel with their own. Within this collection of fifteen duo shows, we find artists who collided overseas and ended up living in the same city, and others who passed each other once and never again. Some saw the artist first, others saw their work first, even years beforehand. There are people who have never met, years-long collaborations, provocative challenges, or simply guests who provide encouragement and inspiration. Theoretical connections, material connections, and connections between the present and past. In Billytown, we feel the generative intimacy of working together, but also the chaos it brings. While the connection between each pair is the primary focus, new and unexpected connections appear between other works in the space. As such, each duet provides a guiding voice within the often chaotic context of a large group show. From the wide variety of motivations and impulses behind each artist's invitation, questions arise about the nature of invitation and the potential of collaboration. 2022

2022 Zwischen Oben und Unten Galerie LinksRechts Hamburg, Nederland For the exhibition 'Zwischen Oben und Unten' the two artists explore similarities in their work and open up new spaces of association. Kadow and Heil share a fascination for the interplay between micro and macrocosmic phenomena. In their works specific properties of the different media (drawing, photography, sculpture) are reflected. 2022

2022 Sensory Threshold LAB 2022 - Holy Grid Billytown Den Haag, Nederland Architecture is all about serial production. It is already evident in the repetition of elements in ancient temples. Greek temples, for instance, entail several handmade yet serial parts like their columns arranged according to a homogeneous grid. With the industrial revolution, machines took over more and more stages of production. This applies to architectural elements in the same way it applies to a vast number of other products. Many of them, cars for instance, create landscapes of cars. Stored on huge parking lots of the factories, they are waiting to be shipped throughout the world. The ornamentation of the products became more and more subtle, changed, or disappeared entirely. Especially complex ornaments were complicated to manufacture within the factories of the 'Fordian Revolution'. With the automated serial production of things, the products themselves became sorts of ornaments, arranged in grid patterns like the cars mentioned above, the tiles on your kitchen floor, the windows on the other side of the street, the pavement of the sidewalk you are walking on, the bricks of the building's wall next to you. Now visible in the foreground of our industrially produced world, the grid became an ornament itself, as you can see in this building. But grids do not solely dominate our built environment. They facilitate and rule cyberspace, our communication technologies, and emerge as models as we dive deeper and gain better understanding of how our brain constructs our reality." "Holy Grid! What's going on? Is our brain really wired to organise our environment and thoughts into homogenous grids? This is what we want to explore and challenge during this years ST LAB. The participants are invited to initiate collaborative approaches, workshops and lectures to create a vast range of positions towards the theme of the grid. Seriality, industrial production, and eventually the grid moved more and more in the foreground of architectural design. You can see this reflected in the building where Billytown is located. New technologies, like the parametric design, producing variants from complex shapes in series is still based on the mesh - a complex grid. Grids do not solely dominate our build environment. They facilitate and dictate cyberspace our communication technologies and they emerge as models as we dive deeper and gain a clearer understanding of how our brain constructs our reality. 2021

2022 We are just sitting in a room, drawing, until the walls are full Home Gallery Den Haag, Duitsland 'We were just sitting in a room, drawing, until the walls are full.' ... and we were not just sitting in a room, drawing, until the walls are full... while constantly drawing and sticking the works to the walls we create a thin film. The architecture in which we are working will vanish soon. With this project and its transgression into the digital space, this room will somehow outlast the 'sloop' (dutch: demolition) of the whole building block which is a monument of modern Dutch communal architecture. The photogrammetry we will create can be seen as a thin imprint - a ghost - of what was here until it itself will disappear. 2021

2019 Ohriversum - Sensory Threshold LAB 2021 De Fabriek Eindhoven Eindhoven, Nederland A project initiated by Katherina Heil in collaboration with Alexander Heil and Rik Möhlmann ‘As a particle of the atmosphere is never lost, so sound is never lost. A strain of music or a simple tone will vibrate in the air forever and ever, decreasing according to a fixed ratio. The diffusion of the agitation extends in all directions, like the waves in a pool, but the ear is unable to detect it beyond a certain point. It is well known that some individuals can distinguish sounds which to others under precisely similar circumstances are wholly lost. Thus the fault is not in the sound itself, but in our organ of hearing, and a tone once in existence is always in existence.’ [Florence McLandburgh The Automaton Ear 1876] I am walking on the beach. The wind swirls around my body. The waves wash the shore, crashing onto the land in an endless phasing repetition, creating an oscillating swell of noise. I encounter a sea shell. I lift it towards my ear – a maze of sound reveals itself to me. We live immersed in a world of sound. However, most of the sounds are filtered out by the shape of our ear. With this project we want to include ourselves deeply within this world, which extends beyond our daily experience. And thus we began our intuitive search for the relations between the ear, its form, and the resulting sound experience. Eventually, all human ears are built using the same blueprint. Nevertheless, every ear is uniquely shaped like a fingerprint and thus influences our subjective acoustic experience of the world. One could say, that listening beings all together live in their subjective sonic worlds. Therefore, we invented the concept of the Ohriversum (German ‘Ear-verse’) in which the entirety of all listening beings establishes a spatial constellation of these individual worlds. ‘Ohriversum’ takes place as part of the ‘Sensory Threshold LAB’. A group of artists exploring the inaudible dimensions of our reality, forming new collaborations, narratives and metaphors. 2021 Cosmic Latte Boek myself Katherina Heil Den Haag, Duitsland katherinaheil.de/text-cosmiclatte_book.html cosmic latte is not a fancy coffee. it's the average color of the universe. but the color code is not the focus of this book. it's the poetic potential of science and outer space which is explored in this work. the visual possibilities of poetry deepen the dialogue between the written word and our associations of imagining the world. earth, cosmos, man, space exploration, earth observation, climate, weather – these topics can be paralyzing regarding their scale, yet at the same time, they open a door to intimate imagination.
