ZUZANNA DZIEDZIC

My current artistic practice focuses on developing installations centered on ceramic sculptures. By building complex sculptural environments, I explore ways to map the connections between things separated by western capitalist and patriarchal systems. The fragile, unpredictable ceramic material serves as a tool for questioning the human need for control, and the multiplicity of my sculptural elements reveals relationalities among their subjects. My latest projects, inspired by feminist posthuman theory, rethink how we view the human-nonhuman and mind-body relations. I want to invite the viewer to see the world outside constructed hierarchies and dichotomies.
